MURRAY GIRL INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Seen & Heard Around Murray

Our attention has been called to some Rhododendrons owned by Mr. John Ward of 1628 Farmer Avenue. They grow thick and lush, which is unusual for these parts. Mr. Ward claims the secret is plenty of rotted wood around them.

Some plants need plenty of acid and they just won't do well without it.

Smallest caught us on an old saying which he figured was brand new. The idea is to say "What's your name." Of course he replies, "Puddin' tane, ask me again and I'll tell you the same."

At any rate he beamed with great delight at this new saying which he apparently had just come across.

It must be at least two hundred years old.

Which leads us to think that the same things have been happening over and over since time began, with just different people enacting the roles.

We'll have to admit, Shakespeare said it better.

Kids doing more reading now with Tarsen holding the top spot. We started to recommend the Jules Verne stories, but suddenly realized that present day science has uncovered so many marvels that Jules Verne would be tame by comparison. His books enthralled us as a boy, but they still may be of some interest to kids.

The street crew is continuing to patch streets between showers. They caught a bad hole on our street yesterday which is much appreciated.

We will have to say too that the telephone folks are doing a first class job on putting North Seventh street back like they found it. They had to dig a trench through the concrete street about two feet wide in order to sink their underground cable. They have put the concrete back now and as far as we can see have done a good job.

Final Concert Is Presented

A very active and enthusiastic audience of children heard the Murray State College Band in the final Children's Concert this year on Wednesday in the college auditorium.

Under the direction of Paul W. Shaban, the band thrilled their audience with familiar and interesting music, dialogue and special features.

By popular request "Tubby the Tub" with Lawrence Rickert as narrator was repeated on this year's program. Mrs. Howard Olla, chairman of the Music Department of Murray Women's Club, which sponsors the concert, with the college, thanked Richard Farrell, head of the Fine Arts Department and Professors Robert Baar and Paul Shaban who have presented the three concerts this year.

GOD'S PROVISION FOR WORSHIP

God's Word repeatedly stresses the importance of worship. From a principle of love to God and a love for His service these people gave liberal gifts. Back of it all were a spirit of gratitude for all that God had done for them and a spirit of faith in His promise as to what He would do for them in the future. Giving must always spring from the heart and be an expression of love for God if it meets His approval. He truly appreciates generous and cheerful giving on the part of His people.

Everyone whose heart had been stirred and whose spirit had been made willing, came with his offering. What an inspiring sight it must have been! The way they came with their gifts shows that they were in full fellowship with God. There wasn't any hesitancy or any stinging. Instead of giving a little money to keep up appearances, their offerings were the overflow of hearts in which worship was welling up for the Lord. Their gifts were the fruitage of fellowship with God and an expression of worship.

Various classes of people had a part in making the gifts. As many as were "willing hearted" brought their offerings. From this we infer there were some who did not bring an offering unto Him. They were not willing to have a part in building the sanctuary. But one thing is certain, namely, that when people do not bring any more gifts, as they had no use for them, Exodus 36:3. Was that not a most extraordinary scene?

When Moses ceased his instructions as to what was needed, the people departed immediately to secure these things. From these scriptures we learn that God's people are responsible for the support of His work. Appeals for this purpose should never be made to the world. Furthermore, God's work is to be supported by the voluntary offerings of His people, and never through appeals, sales, etc. When God's plan for the support of His work is followed, His blessing is always enjoyed. The more we give to God, the more He blesses us in return. The more we give to the Tabernacle and its services and for the holy garments. Without taking time to consider the matter, they responded immediately. Delays are always dangerous to good intentions. The

PARIS IS A GOOD PLACE TO TRADE

- SPORT PARADE -

By OSCAR FRALEY

United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The "old men" still are cutting a wide swath in sports and another case in point today is Mickey Vernon, the "quiet man" of the American League.

Vernon has hit better than 300 only four times in a 17-year major league career. Two of these times, while with Washington, he won the American League batting crown.

And right now the man who has obtained by Cleveland only as first base insurance behind Vic Wertz is nailing the ball at a fast 400 clip.

The six-foot-two-inch Vernon is only carrying out the new sporting precept that life begins at 40, or in that approximate neighborhood. There was a time when your athlete was ready for the muscular boneyard when he passed 35. But not any more.

Musial, incidentally, hasn't stopped yet. He's still leading the pack in the new season with a fantastic .329 average.

Meanwhile, in other sports it's the same story.

Ancient Archie Moore, who is anywhere from 42 to 44 years of age, still reigns as the light heavyweight champion of the world and last Friday just for kicks took on a younger, heavierweight.

In golf, the youngsters are surging forward but the old guard hasn't called it a day yet.

Pete Cooper, 43, won the Semi-Pro-Am and 39-year-old Tommy Bolt just waltzed off with the Colonial Invitation.

Which strips the case of Mickey Vernon of much overdue amazement, except for the fact that the lanky first baseman spreads his big hitting binges over so many years.

Back in 1946 he led the American League with a .333 mark and then they called him a "cheese champion."

He dropped off to .265 the next season. It was a good designation. Cheese improves with age. So while he didn't touch 300 again for six years, Mickey bounced back in 1953 to win the batting crown again, this time with a .337 average.

So what happened? He dropped off to .290 the following season and hasn't been a title threat since that time. Last year, as a parttime operative with the Red Sox, Mickey batted only .241.

When trader Frank Lane took over as Cleveland's general manager this season he obtained the 40-year-old Vernon as a relief man who could step in and his surge since losing its first three games of the season.

The team has combined excellent pitching with some torrid hitting and adequate fielding for its surge since losing its first three games of the season.

Jim Barton, with 6 hits in 14 at bat for a .419 average, is leading the squad in batting.

It is followed closely by Burley Mathis who has a .412 average, and Bill Schade with a .400.

Schade is leading slugger with 11 home runs, two triples and a double. Pitcher Lynn Bridwell has 4 hits for 4 times at bat. The team batting average is .327.

Chico Reyes, who won his third game at East Tennessee (2-0) and the most strikeouts (29). Lynn Bridwell has given up only 3 hits and no runs in 8 1/2 innings pitched.

Coach Johnny Reagan's Racers are 3-0 in conference play, while the Eagles hold a 2-1 mark. An Eagle win would place the two schools in a tie for first with identical 3-1 marks.

Reagan has four possible starting pitchers, depending upon the Eagle lineup. If Morehead starts enough left-handed batters, he plans to use his only lefty, Lynn Bridwell, who has given up only 3 hits and no runs in 8 1/2 innings.

Three right-handers who'll be ready are Joe Heier (1-1), Rich Coleman (1-3), and Tommy Wells (2-0). Chico Reyes, the squad's leading pitcher with a 2-0 mark, could be ready. He pitched a six-hit shutout over East Tennessee Monday, 4-0.

Mothers Not Pampered In Russia

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Women's Editor
NEW YORK — Mothers, who Sunday will be pampered in this country with flowers and gifts, come in the plenty of attention behind the Iron Curtain also. Especially for their productivity on farms, in industry and the maternity wards.

Only two Iron Curtain countries — Poland and Hungary — observe Mother's Day as such, but all pay tribute to the staffs of hospitals and kindergartens each March 8 with "International Women's Day."

"Our comrades in struggle and labor...our glorious mothers, friends and sisters," was the way Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, saluted Soviet women this year.

In a message of greeting from the party's Central Committee, it referred to "women's day" as one of "solidarity of working women all over the world," reported Radio Liberation.

Radio Liberation estimated that of the 71 million Soviet women over 18, at least 50 per cent work. Fifteen million are on farms, one million in construction jobs.

"We also know that the bulk of the street cleaners in Moscow are women," said one official of the R.L. "The Russians believe in REAL equality for women."

Hungary observed Mother's Day last Sunday and Poland will honor moms May 26, said Radio Free Europe. RFE also privately supported broadcasts to five satellite countries.

Reds Reward Motherhood
Along with accent on production for the state, the Reds promote and reward motherhood. And they provide financial aid for the pregnant.

RL said citations for motherhood are of three general types — the "motherhood medal" with two classes — one for the woman who rears five children, one for the mother of six. The "glory of motherhood" order goes to the women who bring up seven, eight and nine.

Highest award is the "mother heroine" honor "which goes to the one with at least 10 children, all living. A devoted child counts only on one condition — it has to be a war casualty."

RL said close to six million women received medals last year, some $5,000 getting "mother heroine" awards.

a repetition of the incident. The Peruvian embassy in Washington apologized officially to the State Department and it was believed the incident, embarrassing as it was to Peru, would not mar the traditionally solid U.S. - Peruvian relations.

Lima's four morning newspapers — government and opposition alike — joined today in denouncing the leftist groups which provoked the assault. They called for punishment of the ring-leaders and said the action was a disgrace for Peru and a scandal that must be wiped out.

Communique Condemns Act
The students federation of San Marcos University issued a communique condemning the violence and rejecting claims that the students themselves were instigating the "barbaric acts."

The federation said it did pass a resolution on May 7 declaring Nixon persona non grata (unwelcome) at the university and repudiating the "imperialistic policy" of the United States. But it said the demonstration was organized by only a few students and "many representatives of other circles" who did not like the Nixon visit.

Observers in Lima said the mob action was Communist-inspired, but that the anti-American feeling displayed went far deeper than that. The Peruvian economy has been declining and businessmen blame this on high U.S. tariffs against Peruvian lead and zinc, "dumping" of U.S. surplus commodities like cotton, and quotas on imports from South America.

exact death toll may never be known. The crash occurred at 6:17 p.m. at the height of the commuter-rush hour.

One train, headed from Rio toward the suburbs, was packed with commuters going home. The other was bringing suburbanites into the city.

An official statement by the Central do Brazil Railroad blamed the accident on Fimino Teixeira Araujo, engineer of the outbound train. It said he was going out on an inbound track without proper permission.

The inbound train was stopped when the outbound train hit it at an estimated 25 to 30 miles an hour.

Brazilian President Juscelino Kubitschek, a doctor himself, and Jaime Cardinal DeBarros Camara, archbishop of Rio, hurried to the scene.

"It is a Dantesque sight," said Kubitschek as he surveyed the grisly scene in a dazing rain.

All the dead were in the forward cars of the two trains, which were smashed like tin toys.

Rescue workers cut injured out of the wreckage with acetylene torches. Doctors amputated limbs on the spot and administered drugs before sending the victims to hospitals.

Cattle Rustling Not Dead; Rustlers Either

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — All the cattle rustling is not confined to television these days, the California State Department of Agriculture reports. Logan D. Morton, livestock identification chief of the department, said thieves have stolen 225 head of cattle in the past three months in California. But one thing has changed from the Old West. The two persons whom the state has caught rustling cattle this year have been shipped off to serve time in San Quentin Prison. No one was strung up.

ward the Potter place, puzzled by the fact that of the four men who had named Cronin, Red Sanders was the one who was killed Sanders might be the last man to shoot Frank Evans, especially if the man didn't have a gun.

One other possibility occurred to Price. Sanders might have shot Evans and one of the other settlers had been there, perhaps unknown to Sanders, and he had cut Sanders down and fled. The gun might have dropped from the Sanders' hand as he fell. But this theory didn't hold water simply because Price knew the caliber of the people who lived on the Yellow Cat, and he didn't believe any of them were capable of shooting Sanders. He was sure, too, that Sanders would not have shot Evans down in cold blood.

Then another question occurred to Price. Why had Sanders been here in the first place? Now the picture was completely muddled and he gave up. It was natural that the men who had named Cronin would get away from the scene of the hanging as fast as they could.

When he reached the Potter farm, he was surprised again. Fifty people or more were gathered in the yard. As his eyes ran over the group, it seemed to him that everybody who lived on the Yellow Cat was here. Suddenly he realized that neither Sam nor Lizzie Potter was in the group. He stepped down the settlers' falling back before him, eyeing him with the same hostility he always felt when he met any of these people. But there was something else, too. They weren't talking. They weren't moving around. They acted as if they were under some kind of spell. Even the children, normally noisy and filled with perpetual motion, stood staring at him.

Finally George Farnum said, "I reckon you brought us the word, but there didn't need to be no more killing. Give us the rest of the day to load up and we'll be moving out in the morning. That's all we're asking. Just the rest of the day."

They were scared. He saw that now. But it was more than just fear. They were completely terrorized. He stared at the men who had moved out to stand in front of their women and children. Farnum, Ripley, Wagner, Bailey. Others whose names he didn't know.

"I didn't bring you any word," Price said. "Maybe you're afraid of me because you've been stealing. If you have, you've got a right to be, but it's because Cronin's been telling you I'm a hired gun for the women, you can quit being scared. I don't belong to the women and I never have. I'm here to find some proof about who lynched Cronin."

They showed they didn't believe him. He asked, "Which killing did you mean, Farnum? Cronin's or Evans'?"

"Evans'," Farnum said. "You mean Cronin's?"

"You didn't know?"

"How would we know?" Farnum said. "We didn't get no farther than right here. I reckon we didn't miss Frank. He swore with the anguish of a man who had been completely whipped by the injustice of life. He waved a big hand toward the house. 'You wanted to know what killing. Them! We found em when we were. We always have dinner here on a Sunday if the weather ain't too bad, and some preaching. Help my girls get here first. We found em yonder.' He motioned again. 'Lizzie had her head propped up on the first step of the porch. Sam, he was over here flat on the ground. We moved em into the shade and covered em with quilts. The crowd parted in front of Price. For the first time he saw the bodies, the feet sticking out from under the quilts. He moved to them and turning the quilts back, took one quick look at the faces of Sam and Lizzie Potter. They covered their faces and walked away. He had known Weston and his friends would go as far as murdering a woman if they thought it necessary. Now he had seen the proof of it. He knew that Rose, too, would have been killed if she hadn't hidden in the brush along the river.

"We ain't found hide nor hair of Jean or Bruce," Farnum said. "You reckon they're in town and she's safe."

Price said, "I'm going to keep her there. I won't let her come to the funeral. Maybe I won't tell her about her folks yet."

"Bruce. What happened to him?" It was a slender, thin-faced girl standing behind Farnum. She had been crying, and now her hands were clenched at her sides, her body so tense she could hardly breathe.

"That's my youngest," Farnum said. "She's Bruce's girl."

"I don't know where Bruce is," Price said. "I'm hunting him. He was in the store when Cronin was strung up. He's the key witness to this whole thing. If any of you have seen him—"

The girl cried out and whirled and ran toward the barn. "Hey," Price called. "Wait!" But she didn't wait. He turned to Farnum. "What's her name?"

"Susie. She's worried about the boy."

"I've got to talk to her," Price said, and ran after the girl.

She reached the barn ahead of him and tried to shut the door and keep him out, but he pushed the door back and caught her by the hands. "Susie. Listen to me. You've got to help."

"A dozen or more riders were moving in a strong, apparently aimless, fashion. There seemed to be only one explanation — the story continues here tomorrow."

Control Anthracnose Is Listed By County Agent

Here are control methods for anthracnose disease in tobacco seedlings issued by the Kentucky Experiment Station plant pathology department:

Use one of three chemicals, Ferbam, Zineb or Maneb.

Use 2 pounds of Ferbam per 50 gallons of water (for spray), which figures out at 5 level tablespoons per gallon of water; or a 15-percent Ferbam dust.

Use 1-1/2 pounds of Zineb per 50 gallons of water (for spray); this figures out to 2-1/2 level tablespoons per gallon of water; or a 10-percent Zineb dust.

Use a quarter-pound of Maneb per 50 gallons of water (for spray); this figures at 1 level teaspoon per gallon of water. The 2-percent Maneb dust is recommended.

Apply sprays for all three materials at about 100-pounds pressure to get coverage of both sides of leaves; apply dusts with a hand-powered crank-type duster. Cover plants well with either spray or dust. Spray or dust two times a week until setting is completed.

Anthracnose is caused by a fungus; it causes small dead spots on leaves and stems of tender plants, resulting in stunting. The spots gradually enlarge and turn light brown or white. Evidence indicates the fungus is spread by water flowing into tobacco beds from outside; thus, well-ditched beds raised above surrounding ground should be safer than beds on the level.

Start spray or dust programs when plants are about the size of a dime, the pathologist recommends. They point out that antibiotics, such as streptomycin, used for wildfire control, are of NO value in anthracnose control.

Awakening Of Plants Time For Practice

The homemakers of South Murray have put into practice some lessons on landscaping.

"One of the first lessons was the proper method of pruning. After our spring shrubs have bloomed, then is the time to cut out the oldest branches. Cut them as close to the ground as you can. Never about half way down or make a round or square plant but let them be natural. Just this out. Prune all the dead out of your roses now, as nature pruned most all of them this winter. In the late fall or after a freeze, roses should be pruned back to about 1 foot. That keeps the winter winds from loosening the roots. You will also have longer stems and better roses from the new growth."

An evergreen plant needs pruning every year. July is a good time for that. Prune about 1/3 of the new growth out keeping its natural shape. They have different forms, the upright, spreading ball, etc. Pruning each year will keep a compact plant. If you neglect pruning evergreens they become too woody and too large for a foundation plant.

Now is the time to fertilize. Yes, evergreens if your ground can be worked. Work a good garden fertilizer around your plants. Your roses need cow manure. Mr. Elliott says even if you have to steal it, use cow manure as your fertilizer for your rose bed. They need it worked in now, again in July, then in January. Scatter over the top of the bed. Bone meal is good for the iris plants. Dogs are a little bad to dig around plants that have had bone meal used; though, Azaleas need a mulch of peat moss or sawdust with manure worked in. You don't dig around your azaleas as their root system is too near the top, so much time good to keep down weeds and to hold the moisture in.

Last fall South Murray group planted daffodils. Here are a few that were very good. Yellow — "Innocence" — "Fountain" — "Beersheba" — "Mr. Hood" — "Br. colored" — "Music Hall" — "Duke of Windsor" — "White or yellow" — "Belts with orange red tinge" — "St. Louis" — "Scarlet Leader" — "More than one blossom to a stem" — "Thalia" — "Shot Silk" — "Chimes" — "Cheerfulness".

We planted many more. Anyone wanting to plant this fall, if you'll contact South Murray we'll be glad to give a larger list.

If you can't plant but one dozen, get 4 of each and plant in 3 groups, each named one together. Next spring I promise you'll enjoy saving. "Good morning, Duke of Windsor. I just love you, Thalia. You make a lovely Easter corsage."

Planting time is here and all the annuals should be in the ground. It's not too late for balled and burlap plants, potted roses. We think of balled plants as foundation plants. Here is a good list: Texas Yew, Hemlock. They can be kept pruned to the desired shape and size for a longer period of time. They are the more expensive of the needle type but are worth more. The broadleaf evergreen is beginning to be appreciated. The small hollies of which there are six or more kinds, Ilex, Mahonia, English and Japanese and others. Ligustrum makes a good corner plant when grouped in threes.

This is just a little of our lessons on landscaping so I do hope all the county will continue to ask for the lessons.

Coldwater Club Began During 1955

The Coldwater Homemakers Club consists of 14 members from the Coldwater and Backusburg communities. We also have three night members who are getting the lesson material and attend meetings whenever possible. Mrs. Thomas Smith is our president.

We were organized in 1955, and are proud of our club and the things we have accomplished.

Our 4-H Club leader has seven girls who made garments in their club work this year. Five of them won blue ribbons and will show their garments at the state. One of them was grand champion of all the play suits on rally day in Murray.

Six of our members have received reading awards. We have monthly devotion by our reading chairman, and daily Bible reading is stressed.

Two of our members have attended Farm and Home Week in Lexington.

There has been some very nice upholstery work done by our members and several pairs of draperies made as a result of our former lessons.

Our December food lesson was enjoyed as a Christmas dinner.

We also met during December and made beautiful frosted Christmas candles of different colors.

At our last meeting, plans were made for the club to do charity work. In order to raise funds for this we had a bake sale in April.

Treatment Is Given For Furniture

LEXINGTON, Ky. —The bright sunshine of spring may bring many surprises. Take, for example, the condition of your furniture. Tables and chairs to which you had given no thought, suddenly demand attention because of scratches, nicks and dents.

Fortunately, many of these conditions react to home treatment, says Miss Kathryn Sebree, UK Extension specialist in home furnishings. A good general treatment that often removes scratches and white spots is a going-over of all furniture woods with a cloth wrung from 1 quart of warm water, 3 tablespoons of linseed oil, 1 tablespoon of turpentine and 1 teaspoon of vinegar. Then polish with a dry clean cloth.

For furniture that needs refinishing, Miss Sebree recommends penetrating sealer, which has proved to be a durable and satisfactory finish. Originally made for floors, some penetrating sealers now make a surface impervious to heat, water, cold and ink — important points for table and desk tops.

Sanding, repairing and regluing may be necessary first steps, including removal of nicks and dents. Thorough dusting is a must, says Miss Sebree, in her recommendation of "one cloth" bought at automobile supply stores. Store the cloth in a sealed can when not in use.

To apply the penetrating sealer, follow the directions on the container, using lintless nylon rags. A dry clean piece of the same fabric should be used to remove any excess from the surface. Usually three coats of the sealer will give the desired tone to the wood and provide an excellent protective finish. Thorough drying should be allowed between coats, followed in each instance with light rubbing with steel wool and careful dusting.

A week after the final coat, rub the piece of furniture with pumice stone and oil to give a satin finish, rather than a high gloss.
